BOOKS & BOOK CHAPTERS

SWIPE LEFT: HOW DATING APPS BETRAY USERS AND PROTECT PREDATORS (under contract with Cambridge University Press).

- Reveals how dating platforms have fostered a perilous environment where legal frameworks shield predators rather than users, blocking victims from sharing crucial safety information through community warnings or verification systems.
- Uncovers the stark privacy paradox in online dating—potential victims lack access to essential background information while bad actors weaponize privacy laws and defamation claims to maintain secrecy and silence survivors.
- Illuminates how weak platform regulations and intimidation tactics have constructed a digital dating landscape where women and other vulnerable users face disproportionate risks to their safety and privacy while searching for connection.
- Examines the role of artificial intelligence in potentially affecting this landscape in both positive and negative directions.

The Complex Landscape of Criminal Sanctions for IP Infringement in the United States, in CRIMINAL ENFORCEMENT OF INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY IN ASIA: SOURCES, SIGNIFICANCE, AND SIDE-EFFECTS 51 (Kung-Chung Liu & Tianxiang He eds., Oxford University Press 2026).
